

Disclosure Statement for “Consumer Spending During Unemployment: Positive and Normative Implications” – Pascal Noel, Booth School of Business

While working on this paper, Noel was a paid contractor who performed work on JPMC Institute reports. Noel was not paid for time spent writing this paper. JPMC reviewed the paper to ensure that privacy protocols were followed and that no JPMC intellectual property was disclosed.

Noel gratefully acknowledges funding from the Washington Center for Equitable Growth, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation Grant No. G-2011-6-22, “Pre- Doctoral Fellowship Program on the Economics of an Aging Workforce,” awarded to the National Bureau of Economic Research, and the National Institute on Aging Grant No. T32-AG000186 awarded to the National Bureau of Economic Research.

The authors declare that they have no other relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

Harvard’s IRB issued a letter that the research protocol #14-3606 is not considered human subjects research.