

Disclosure Statement

James J. Heckman

This research was supported by a grant from the Institute for New Economic Thinking to the Center for the Economics of Human Development. An early version of this analysis was presented in a round table, "The Curse of the Top Five," at the AEA meetings on January 7th, 2017.

Participants included the authors, George Akerlof, Angus Deaton, Drew Fudenberg, and Lars Peter Hansen. For a video of the session, see <https://www.aeaweb.org/webcasts/2017/curse>. James Heckman receives compensation for his role as Editor at the Journal of Political Economy, which is one of the "Top Five" journals discussed in this paper. A conflict of interest management plan is in place in accordance with University of Chicago conflict of interest policies. This project was conducted under a human subject protection plan approved by the University of Chicago's Institutional Review Board (IRB16-1373). We thank George Akerlof, Dan Black, Tom Ferguson, Jorge Luis García, Rob Johnson, Ganesh Karapakula, Rasmus Landersø, Meera Mody, Magne Mogstad, Tanya Rajan, and Harald Uhlig for comments. We thank Patrick Chen and Aakash Rao for outstanding research assistance.