

Joseph Kaboski's Disclosure Statement for "From Micro to Macro Development"

Over the past three years, Kaboski has received substantial financial support from Yale Research Initiative on Innovation and Scale's (Y-RISE), CEPR's Structural Transformation and Economic Growth (STEG) Research Programme, the IMF, and the Becker-Friedman Institute . An earlier version of this paper was based heavily on material prepared as a review commissioned by Y-RISE as part of Kaboski's role as convener of its network on Macro, Growth and Welfare Effects of Policy Interventions. In addition, Kaboski has a paid position as Chair of the Academic Steering Committee of Structural Transformation and Economic Growth (STEG) Research Programme and unpaid positions on the boards of the Bureau for Research and Economic Analysis of Development (BREAD) and the Catholic Research Economists Discussion Organization (CREDO) and the Academic Advisory Council of the Institute for New Structural Economics (INSE) at Peking University.