

Disclosure Statement for Martha Stinson

June 10, 2022

All of my work on the article “The Long-Run Effects of the 1930s Redlining Maps on Children” has been performed while I was an employee of the United States government at the Census Bureau. I have received no financial support of any kind beyond my regular government salary. I am not an officer of any relevant non-profit or profit-making entity. I have no family members who receive financial support or are officers of groups that would be relevant for this work.

The Census Bureau reviewed this paper to ensure that no confidential information was released. Otherwise, the opinions and findings in the paper are strictly the views of myself and my co-authors.